RIASEC is an acronym that represents the six primary types of personalities or vocational interests identified by psychologist John Holland. The model is often used in career counseling and guidance to help individuals understand their preferences and make informed decisions about their careers. Each letter in the acronym corresponds to a specific personality or interest type:

1. Realistic (R)
  2. Investigative (I)
  3. Artistic (A)
  4. Social (S)
  5. Enterprising (E)
  6. Conventional (C)

Key characteristics associated with an Enterprising personality in the RIASEC model:

- 1. Leadership Skills: Enterprising individuals possess leadership qualities and enjoy taking on roles that involve guiding and directing others. They may be comfortable making decisions and taking charge of situations.
  - 2. Negotiation Skills: Negotiation skills are often a strength for those with an Enterprising personality. They may excel in roles that involve bargaining, deal-making, or contract negotiations.
  - 3. Entrepreneurial Spirit: Individuals with an Enterprising personality may have an entrepreneurial spirit, enjoying the challenge of starting and growing businesses or projects.
